Electromagnetic induction - Wikipedia

Electrical resistance, electrical resistance) is a property of a material that opposes the flow of electric current. It is measured in ohms (Ω). The resistance of a material depends on its length, cross-sectional area, and resistivity. The resistance of a material is given by the formula: $R = \rho \frac{L}{A}$, where R is the resistance, ρ is the resistivity, L is the length, and A is the cross-sectional area.

Electromagnetic induction is the production of an electromotive force (EMF) across an electrical conductor by a changing magnetic field. It was discovered by Michael Faraday in 1831. The induced EMF is proportional to the rate of change of the magnetic flux through the circuit. The induced EMF is given by the formula: $\mathcal{E} = -\frac{d\Phi}{dt}$, where \mathcal{E} is the induced EMF, Φ is the magnetic flux, and t is time.
